

HighLights

Trial Gardens and HortResearch at the South Mississippi Branch Experiment Station

Volume 3, Number 1

January 26, 2016

Published by Dr. Gene Blythe

'Artwork' broccoli, an All-America Selections (AAS) winner for 2015, first produces a standard crown (above). After harvest, plants produce a crop of gourmet style, sweet stem broccoli (below). These same plants in our AAS Display Garden are currently working on their third crop. 'Artwork' broccoli was bred by Seminis Vegetable Seeds.

The new 'Masterpiece' pea (above), a Burpee exclusive, brings something new to the garden and table — edible tendrils with the delicate flavor of snap peas! The tendrils can be used in a salad, as a garnish, or (our preference) as a fun snack right in the garden. Eventually the plants produce tasty pods with large peas (below). The plants are also quite ornamental and can be used effectively in containers.

